

From the CHANCELLOR

October 3, 2023

Dear TCU Students, Faculty and Staff,

Texas Christian University has much to celebrate, and as we enter the finale of our Sesquicentennial year, our community is also building a bright future for TCU's next 150 years. You can feel the impact of TCU's ever-expanding vision to be a world-class, values-centered university in the academic and personal development of incredible Horned Frog students; in the passion and talent of our faculty and staff; in the generosity of alumni and donors who have invested in Lead On: A Campaign for TCU; and in the master planning and expansion of TCU's unrivaled campus environment for living and learning.

Presidential Investiture

Most importantly, we celebrate leadership and what it means at TCU. On Thursday, November 9, the TCU community will celebrate leadership with the formal Investiture of President Daniel W. Pullin.

Many of you know President Pullin; since his naming as President in December 2022, he has spent countless hours meeting with the people of TCU to learn and participate in the full and complex work of our beloved university. He has been an excellent partner to me and his colleagues in every area of campus.

This long-held academic tradition will acknowledge President Pullin's first year as President, as well as acknowledge the shared responsibility of stewarding TCU's legacy of scholarship and knowledge into a promising future. An investiture is a time for us to gather as a community and reaffirm the University's commitment to our values.

Mark Your Calendars

In the coming weeks we will be releasing viewing locations and event ticket availability, so stay tuned to your email for opportunities to engage; you can always check TCU's calendar for updates.

In a season of celebrations, our upcoming Presidential Investiture allows us to underscore the importance of leadership, innovation, inclusion and community in a rare and special way. I hope that you will all show support for our President and participate in this historic event for TCU.

Thank you and Go Frogs!

Victor J. Boschini, Jr.
Chancellor
